Frosch Farmhouse is one of the most interesting buildings in the area north of East New Market. It is a one and one-half story frame structure with a one story addition on the back. The front portion has a leanto roof, a side entrance and two windows on the facade and two dormers above. The windows have 6/6 sash and both the door and dormers have odd pilasters. On both gables is a chimney, not symmetrically placed. The south gable has a 4/4 sash window on the west side of the chimney with a door and window on the east side, a window on the second story and a small casement in the attic.

A hood covers another door and window, adjacent the main body of the house, which is an extension of the offset kitchen. The kitchen itself has a center door and two windows. There is a chimney in the center of the roof of the kitchen.

Presently the house is having a temporary roof installed by interested parties.
